

There's no such thing as a "Swedish Culture".

What did your people ever accomplish, discover, invent, or build...? Name your people's famous scientists, architects, industrialists, artists, poets, authors explorers, composers, philosophers, historians, doctors, inventors, and theologians. Why are you so eager to move here, instead of moving to an uninhabited land and building your own nation? In how many events does your nation win medals in the Olympics, and who ever wanted to buy a calander of your women wearing swimsuits...?

"...we are told that the Viking ships were so well designed that even with modern technology it is impossible to design a more seaworthy craft of its type. The Vikings built their ships without blueprints or plans—merely by "eyeing the craft up" as they built it.

[Even today, only one or two people in all of Scandinavia keep this dying art alive, building beautiful boats by eyeing them up, using a simple hand-forged ax and the nearly forgotten Norse measurement called the alen (about 21 inches). Is it a coincidence that the Egyptian Royal cubit (20.67 inches) which was identical to the ancient Hebrew long cubit, is roughly the same as the Norse alen?]" [from Uncovering the Mysteries of Your Hidden Inheritance, Balaicius.]

Sweden was a world military power and leader in technology, cars, aircraft and has had one of the highest standards of living in the world—for centuries.

The Vikings, without modern instruments, sailed the world's oceans over 1,000 years ago, some of their ships holding 100 men, armor, and horses. They also sailed them up and down the rivers of Europe, even emptying the ships and dragging them over land, when the rivers ceased to be navigable.
